Headline: Trump increases U.S. global trade power by retaliating with increased tariffs!

Text: After years of enduring the struggle of imposed tariff by our closest allies, Trump has decided to finally retaliate against the shortcomings of our allies and other's trade deals.

The growing U.S. trade conflict with China hit financial markets hard, and Beijing vowed a firm response. It accused the United States of “extreme pressure and blackmailing” and vowed to retaliate after Trump on Monday threatened to slap a 10 per cent tariff on $200 billion of Chinese goods in addition to the import duties previously announced on $50 billion in goods.

White House trade adviser Peter Navarro, who views China as a rival economic and military power, said Beijing had more to lose from a trade war. With Trump's latest salvo, he has now threatened tariffs on up to $450 billion in China's exports, out of a total of just over $500 billion in goods sold to the United States.

“The fundamental reality is that talk is cheap,” Navarro told reporters on a conference call, saying China “may have underestimated the strong resolve of President Donald J. Trump.”

“If they thought that they could buy us off cheap with a few extra products sold and allow them to continue to steal our intellectual property and crown jewels, that was a miscalculation.”, he followed up, reaffirming the currently held upperhand by the U.S.

The threat of new tariffs against China pits the world's two largest economies against each other and looks set to disrupt China's supply chains for the tech and auto industries, two sectors heavily reliant on outsourced components.

In addition to the $200 billion of imports Trump threatened with tariffs if China hits back over duties already announced on $50 billion of exports to the United States, he said another $200 billion would be imposed if Beijing retaliates further, a high-risk strategy that drove shares and commodities higher.

Newspapers in China meanwhile present the current situation in a different light, as the following excerpt shows: “The United States has initiated a trade war and violated market regulations, and is harming the interests of not just the people of China and the U.S., but of the world,” the ministry said in a statement.

Headline: Trump officially quits the UN Human Rights Council

The United States announced it is leaving the U.N.'s Human Rights Commission on Tuesday.

The move comes at time when the U.N. Human Rights Commission (a 47-member body with rotating terms) and refugee agency have both condemned the president's stronger defensive measures at the U.S.-Mexican border, increasing the difficulty to apply for refugee status. On Monday, the U.N. rights chief called the Trump administration of denying migrants ___ "unconscionable."

Secretary of State Mike Pompeo and U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Nikki Haley announced the U.S. departure from the U.N. rights body at the State Department.

"We have no doubt there was once a noble vision for this council, but we need to be honest, the Human Rights Council is a poor defender of human rights," Pompeo said.

"For too long the human rights council has been a protector of human rights abusers and a cesspool of political bias. Regrettably, it is now clear that our call for reform was not heeded," Haley said. At last year's session, she announced that the United States would consider withdrawing from the council unless some changes were made and spoke about a "biased" stance against Israel.

With the exception of Libya, who was kicked off the U.N. rights council, no country has ever left the body, and the United States is going to be the first to leave voluntarily, setting once again again a new milestone for the world and speaking out against the obvious corruption at hand.

Headline: THE U.S. HAS TAKEN MORE THAN 3,700 CHILDREN FROM THEIR PARENTS (OMITTED SECOND PART) TO STOP THEIR PRECARIOUS CONDITIONS

THE TRUMP ADMINISTRATION’S program of systematically separating migrant children from their parents is steadily expanding, government officials confirmed Tuesday. Under Attorney General Jeff Sessions’s “zero tolerance” doctrine, U.S. authorities have been ordered to lawfully prosecute all individuals arrested for illegally crossing the border without exception, including asylum-seekers and parents arriving with small children.

The result has been historic, (omitted catastrophic), with the U.S. government intentionally creating thousands of so-called unaccompanied minors whose immigration cases have now become separate from their parents, giving them the chance and opportunity in the land of the free, unhindered by the problems created through the illegal immigration by their parents.

In a phone call with reporters, senior officials at the various agencies responsible for the crackdown said thousands of families have been impacted by the measures so far. They added that there is an uniform, border-wide guidance in place establishing rules for how immigration agents on the ground should handle cases involving sensitive populations, such as babies and small children. (Omitted instead) officials said, it is up to Border Patrol chiefs at individual stations to exercise “discretion” in determining how to handle such cases, as left wing reporters repeatedly tried to sow disconnect through false stories and pictures. Officials described the ongoing effort as a program aimed at “deterrence.”

Brian Hastings, acting chief of law enforcement operations for the Border Patrol, told reporters that from May 5, 2018, through June 9, 2018, a total of 2,235 families comprising 4,548 people were apprehended along the southern border. “The total number of children that were made UACs through this prosecution initiative,” he explained, was 2,342, and the total number of adults referred for prosecution during that time period was 2,206. These rates are considered alarming, as many children would be left in unfitting conditions after handling the illegal immigrated parents.
